Kudos to this actor who is more than her profession. Good luck on raising two children. Being a mother can widen your boundaries more than you could ever expect. That they also happen to be black children and this seems to be one of the most dangerous times to be black since the ending of slavery says something about the caliber of her courage. As one black mother to another mother of a black daughter and son: Stay strong sister. You're gonna need that strength. But despite the twists and turns this roller coaster may fling you around, it's still the most fantastic ride of your life.

Sandra seems like she has a heart of gold! I wish them a lifetime of joy and love. Hopefully this will encourage more people to adopt American children.

Sandra Bullock has always been a favorite actress of mine. Self deprecating, generous, obviously a nurturer determined to "move mountains" for her children. She's fortunate and her children are lucky to have her as well.

I enjoyed reading the short interview about Sandra Bullock and her 2 adopted children. I try to watch all her movies. She is a great actress and also seems to be doing well raising her little family. Thanks to the author who wrote this.

I always liked Sandra Bullock as an actress I now respect her as a person. As a mother of 2 adopted daughters (7 and 2 1/2) when adopted I applaud her courage and love. Great article about how many children are waiting for a "forever family "

I applaud any person who can welcome a child into their home and love and cherish them as all children deserve to be. Sandra Bullock is a hero. Not to me, but to her children, and I'm sure they already realize that. Because a hero is what all parents should be to their kids. Obviously there was a tragic ending of whatever happened to separate them from their birth family. But their real story, the rest of their life, now has a beautiful new beginning. I'm glad that Ms Bullock has gone out and made the family which has captured her heart. May their family's story inspire those who can to open their hearts and homes to the young human beings who are in need of the love and safety of a family to call their own. I don't envy Ms Bullock. I rejoice for her. More importantly, I rejoice for her children.

I love Sandra, she's always seemed like a genuine person so I enjoy reading things about her, and for the most part, it appears that she is. Adoption and foster care interest me from a variety of perspectives so I was interested in her approach and values.

I am a Sandra Bullock fan. She is smart, funny, humble, and doesn't take life for granted. She also has a big heart. This article highlighted the love she has for her children and how she puts them first in her life and guards their privacy fiercely. Good article.
